

About the Frank Davis Scholarship

Frank Davis was an inspiring Head of the Art Department at Palmerston North Teachers College (now Massey Institute College of Education) from 1963 until his death in 1983.

Frank's influence has been of lasting importance for TLC, not least because of his ability to bridge the gap between Māori and other cultures.

The Frank Davis Scholarship is a grant that is given to assist students in their study at The Learning Connexion. It is open to current and prospective students and is based on commitment, potential and a willingness to take creative work across cultural boundaries.

Jonathan Milne:

"It was easy to do art in Frank's classes because he was so supportive of us being ourselves. If we had something to say through art he would help us make it happen. For me this was a big contrast with university art where there always seemed to be an invisible set of rules known only to the anointed masters. Frank liberated us to find our own voices. Once we found our voice he helped us polish our skills and connect with the world."

Alice Wilson Milne:

"Frank encouraged me to find 'a voice.' His confidence in me bolstered my desire to contribute what I could to the New Zealand world I lived in. Frank and his wife Waana were very generous in their hospitality.

I remember his paintings for their raw expression, passion, honesty and the way he stripped an issue bare to expose reality. They were BIG, intelligent and forceful statements."

What does the scholarship cover?

The Frank Davis Scholarship is awarded annually to cover all or part of a student's tuition fees.

How to apply

Fill out and submit the following in our online application form.

- Read the rules and conditions outlined in this document
- Submit three recent works that have the potential to cross cultural boundaries and may challenge current social patterns.
- You may include comments on why you believe that cross-culture connections are important (up to 200 words).
- Include two letters of support from referees outlining why you are an ideal candidate to receive this scholarship
- Our scholarship forms have been expanded to allow applicants to provide additional evidence in the form of three supporting images per submission, which may include (but are not limited to); developmental drawings or sketches, trial/sample works that have relevance to the finished piece or images showing stages of progression through the work. While these images are not required they will be considered as part of your application.

Please note: As the application is through an online form we recommend applicants prepare the information above in a text document prior to submission in case of any complications. Images of your work must be available digitally, sized to 1MB or less.
